Re: The Estate of Yaron Ungar et al. v. The Palestinian Authority, et al.

Dear Mr. Hill,

As per your request, this letter serves as the Rule 26(a)(2) Expert Report of my Opinion on whether the examination of Dr. Allan Brenman was sufficient to render an expert opinion on the issues before the court in the above referenced case, specifically with respect to the psychological status of Dvir and Yishai Ungar and the relationship of their current mental status to the deaths of their parents.

I am an Associate Professor of Psychiatry and Behavioral Neurosciences at the University of Virginia School of Medicine and the Medical Director of the Institute of Law, Psychiatry and Public Policy at the University of Virginia. I am an attending psychiatrist at the Commonwealth Center for Children and Adolescents in Staunton, Virginia. My publications and credentials to provide this expert opinion are outlined in my Curriculum Vitae, attached hereto as Exhibit A. A list of deposition and trial testimony provided over the past four years is also included. The fee for all time and services performed by me is $400.00 per hour for evaluation services and $500.00 per hour for any legal proceeding, including declarations, affidavits, depositions, and court testimony.

This analysis was performed by the application of my education, training, and experience to the facts of the case and by reviewing the following material:

1. The two-day hearing transcripts from the Damages hearing that occurred on July 12, 2002 and July 15, 2002, which included the testimony of psychologist Allan Brenman
2. The January 27, 2004 Decision in the above referenced case

3. The July 12, 2004 Decision in the above referenced case

A forensic evaluation differs from a clinical evaluation in a number of important ways, and the role of a forensic evaluator differs from that of a clinical psychologist or psychiatrist evaluating a potential patient. Given the fact that forensic evaluation is undertaken for legal purposes, the forensic evaluator must be aware of the multitude of factors impacting on the reasons for the evaluation as well as the evaluee's claimed distress. The need to strive for objectivity is a canon of forensic evaluation. Objectivity requires that the evaluator be privy to all the data available and to search for information that might contradict the evaluator's initial opinion and/or biases. It is my opinion to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that Dr. Brenman's testimony indicates deficits in several areas of forensic evaluation that compromised his ability to render an opinion to a reasonable degree of professional certainty:

1. Dr. Brenman spoke to Dvir and Yishai Ungar on what he admitted was a "superficial" level, and did not perform an "in-depth" assessment of them. Therefore he did not assess their then current mental status, nor did he perform an adequate evaluation of their emotions, cognitions, and behaviors that may or may not have been related to the death of their parents. A thorough forensic evaluation would need to have included a standard psychological or psychiatric evaluation of each boy, including a mental status evaluation, in order to diagnose the presence or absence of a mental disorder.
2. Dr. Brenman's opinion regarding the Ungar boys' functioning at that time was based on history provided by the maternal grandparents, which was inadequate for the purposes of forensic psychological evaluation. In forensic evaluation, the possibility that the evaluee and his or her family may have strong and understandable reasons to minimize, exaggerate, or misperceive signs and symptoms must be considered. Therefore it is critical that additional data be sought in forming one's opinion. Such sources of information may include:
  - a. School records
  - b. Medical and mental health records, including records of grief counseling, psychiatric or psychological evaluation, and mental health treatment records
  - c. Other pertinent records as available that may have shed light on the boys' functioning at the time of the evaluation and in the past
3. Because Dr. Brenman lacked sufficient data on their then current mental state of Dvir and Yishai Ungar, and did not obtain their own accounts of how they perceived the deaths of their parents to have affected them, much of his testimony recounted possibilities of how children generally might be expected to react. His opinions were not based on adequate evaluations of these particular boys, Dvir and Yishai Ungar. Adequate forensic evaluation would have included collateral interviews with additional collateral sources who knew the boys, and a review of critical records, which would have provided more objective data regarding their functioning.
4. While Dr. Brenman testified that the children had suffered "psychic trauma," he had not performed an adequate psychological evaluation of the children, which would have been necessary to come to that conclusion. As in other areas of medicine, a thorough evaluation is critical to accurate diagnosis. While it may be appropriate to assume that an individual who has been exposed to tuberculosis, may have contracted tuberculosis, this is not always or even often the case. Whether or not an exposed individual is infected with the pathogen that causes tuberculosis is result of a variety of factors. Likewise, whether or not an individual manifests a psychiatric disorder is related to a host of factors, and proper evaluation requires a thorough assessment of the individual as well as his or her environment. Dr. Brenman did not perform a forensic psychiatric or psychological evaluation that would have enabled him to testify to a reasonable degree of professional certainty regarding the mental state of either Ungar child or to the potential relationship of parental loss to their then current functioning.

October 15, 2010

I hope that the information I have provided is useful and clear. Please feel free to contact me with any questions at (540) 294-0632.

Sincerely,

Eileen P. Ryan, D.O.
